

W.Va. needs $5B more to fund road, bridge repairs, report says

Almost $10 billion is needed to maintain and repair West Virginia's roads and bridges over the next decade, according to a report by a nonprofit transportation research group. TRIP's report found that 37% of the state's roads are in poor or mediocre condition. The report also noted that, at this point, the state can identify only $5 billion in funding to pay for repairs and improvements. Forbes/The Associated Press (7/8)
