

Tuesday, November 1, 2016

Bad Roads

According to a new report from the TRIP national transportation research group, about half of major roads in Oklahoma City and Tulsa are in poor condition, costing drivers roughly $1,000 annually in additional vehicle operating costs. The report says the annual cost in Oklahoma City is highest among all urban areas and Tulsa is second-highest.