Expires this Saturday.

Local push for license plate renewal

by Ken Miller

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch

Missouri's Department of Revenue is extending its license plate renewal program into the new year to help out people who haven't renewed their plates yet this year.

The program, which started in October, offers people a grace period to register their plates without a fine. The program ends Saturday, so people who haven't renewed their plates yet need to do so by then to avoid a fine.

The department is accepting plates for the current license year, which runs from October 1, 2018, to September 30, 2019. People can renew their plates at the local revenue office or online at revenue.mo.gov.

The department is also offering a late renewal fee of $20, which will be charged to people who renew their plates after the grace period ends on Saturday.

Missouri's license plate renewal program is part of a national effort to encourage people to renew their plates, which helps the state collect revenue and keep track of vehicles on the road.

People who renew their plates before the grace period ends will not be charged the late renewal fee.

Contact information:

Missouri Department of Revenue

111 Capitol Way

Jefferson City, MO 65101

Phone: (573) 751-3561

Website: revenue.mo.gov

License plate renewal:

Missouri Department of Revenue

111 Capitol Way

Jefferson City, MO 65101

Phone: (573) 751-3561

Website: revenue.mo.gov