REPORT: Roads in Rochester Cost Average Driver More than $1,600 a Year

Tuesday, December 8, 2020

A report from the national transportation research organization, TRIP, says roads in the Rochester area cost the average driver more than $1600 per year.

The report blames roads that are deteriorated, congested and lacking in some desirable safety features.

The report looked at road and bridge conditions, congestion, highway safety, and transportation funding in New York State's major metropolitan areas.
