

TRIP identifies rural transportation areas in need of work

By Nicole Heslip | October 13, 2022

A new report analyzes which states are in most need of rural road and bridge repair.

Rocky Moretti is the director of Policy and Research at TRIP, a national transportation research nonprofit.

“A number of Midwestern states are showing up with still a high share of its rural bridges in poor condition, in fact, the report points out that 80 percent of bridges in poor condition across the country are in the rural areas,” he says.
