Florida's rural roads face 73% traffic surge

Traffic on Florida's rural roads is expected to increase by 73% by 2045, according to a new study by a national transportation research nonprofit (TRIP). The study shows that congestion and freight demands are increasing along with the population and economy of the Sunshine State. The report also touched on the dangers of this increase, as these roads reportedly have a high fatality rate. Source: [WCTV]
